

boys.sg reviews

our genuine experiences

(logo image taken from www.aquariuscove.com)

Aquarius Cove Indoor Playground

(<http://www.aquariuscove.com/>)
(<https://www.facebook.com/aquariuscove/>)

boys.sg had the honour of gracing this new indoor playground. We brought along two boys (aged 3 and 4.5) to experience the first Aquarium-themed playground in Singapore and what got them really excited was when they knew that they would be able to play together with the fishes, octopus and other sea creatures there!

It was easy to locate the place which is quite centralised. Aquarius Cove is partnered with the Qian Xi Group of Restaurants and Bounce of Joy. We entered through the Qian Xi restaurant entrance to take the lift up to level 5 where Aquarius Cove is located.

Aquarius Cove is a cosy new set up in Singapore, every part of the playground is pretty clean and neat. They have a very helpful and friendly staff who attended to our needs.

Things we love about Aquarius Cove:

This is their featured "rock climbing" wall where the boys can attempt to climb their way up through the fishes!

The pool of thoughtfully colour-blended sea of balls! All time favourite of the boys!

For reviews on your business products and services,
contact us at reviews@boys.sg

This little ship plays out some children's songs when in movement. The boys enjoyed themselves as sailors!

Both adults and kids may have a go at this carousel, as though riding on fast swimming fishes!

This is the submarine tunnel! The boys had some adventurous fun exploring this tunnel! They could even sit inside and watch the other children playing on the carousel downstairs. Nice view!

It is definitely not a playground if there ain't no slides!

We missed out on the Bouncy Castle as it was sent for maintenance. The boys were a tad disappointed but still, they had much fun at Aquarius Cove.

We were able to sit at one end of the place to enjoy the reasonably priced finger food and drinks while observing what the boys were doing. Aquarius Cove also had a CCTV installed near where we were sitting. It definitely felt safe with that TV around.

We would recommend Aquarius Cove to boys who are aged 5 and below. The adventurous older boys would probably prefer a much bigger playground with more challenging obstacles.

boys.sg ratings: 3.8/5
(would be better if the boys get to bounce around on the bouncy castle)

For reviews on your business products and services,
contact us at reviews@boys.sg